Earn your degree at a pace that fits your life. At UIC Business we offer full-time, part-time and weekend options, combining online and in-person coursework.

Just steps from the Loop, students have access to the city's global corporate and financial center. Our graduates build careers at Google, Samsung, JPMorgan Chase, Walgreens and hundreds of other companies. At UIC Business we provide the key combination of innovative curriculum and world-class faculty instruction at a value price point to yield a high ROI on your investment.

At our dedicated UIC Business Career Center, networking starts long before graduation as students connect with more than 100 companies on campus. Events on campus bring together business experts, entrepreneurs and some of our 35,000 alumni to prepare students for the next step in their careers.

With an emphasis on developing leadership competencies, the Professional Development Program curriculum is designed to help students master the intangible skills needed to succeed. Students master the key competencies that employers seek: written and verbal communication, teamwork, problem solving, decision making, confidence and self-awareness, and relationship building. Using the training modules of Second City improvisational theater, faculty prepare students to become leaders in their fields.

In research based, outcomes driven programs, students work with faculty whose work is published in leading research journals across a full range of business topics.

On campus research centers include:

- Center for Research in Information Management
- Center for Supply Chain Management and Logistics
- Institute for Leadership Excellence and Development
- International Center for Futures and Derivatives

At the UIC Business Liautaud Graduate School, learning extends beyond the classroom and into our great city. Chicago is a world-class, global business center built on big ambitions and diverse perspectives. Like our hometown, UIC Business believes a variety of backgrounds, cultures and viewpoints is a powerful incubator for new and transformational ideas, and provides a significant advantage to succeed in today's global business environment. Strong relationships with the city's business community, a dynamic and connected alumni network, and a home at Chicago's largest public research university give UIC Business students a competitive and professional edge.

Students can pursue an MBA and/or one of six specialized master's degrees (Accounting, Business Analytics, Finance, Management Information Systems, Marketing, and Supply Chain and Operations Management) or train to become a business professor with a PhD. Distinguished faculty experts build on the bedrock business essentials, bringing in the most current approaches to the classroom to help students develop the critical technical, social and conceptual skills essential to strategic thought and management excellence.

A degree from the UIC Business Liautaud Graduate Schoolo sets you apart as a knowledgeable, skilled and effective professional–ready to make an impact.

"I found the best data analytics opportunities across the widest range of business applications available at UIC Business. On top of that, my classmates come from all over the field—banking, software development, healthcare. Just working with them is an education all its own."
